In Fall, 2016 you can travel to Carnegie Hall or the Berlin Philharmonie to hear Vyacheslav Gryaznov premier his new solo piano transcription of Prokofiev's "Sur la Borysthene." Or you can attend the same program at Steinway Society - The Bay Area for their November 12 recital - a remarkable opportunity for Bay Area music lovers.

"... Vyacheslav Gryaznov... is a brilliant pianist and composer. The virtuosity and inventiveness of his transcriptions fascinate and enthrall." Musical Life magazine

One of today's rapidly ascending concert pianists and transcriptionists, Vyacheslav Gryaznov (pronounced: vee-OCH-a-slaf gree-OZ-noff) is making his West Coast debut in a concert illustrating why his artistry and transcriptions have excited so many. His piano mastery is highly acclaimed, as evidenced by numerous awards in prestigious international competitions, including six First and Grand prizes. Among his Firsts/Grands: Moscow's Rubinstein Competition and Italy's "To the Memory of Rachmaninov" Competition.

A former student and current assistant professor at the Moscow Conservatory, Gryaznov is an artist of Moscow Philharmonic Society and a member its key Stars of the 21st Century project. He has also collaborated with major companies including NHK Japanese Broadcasting Corporation (a project comprising 30 recitals, and CD and video recordings), the Melodiya record label, and Radio Orpheus.

In 2014 Vyacheslav signed with Schott Music, a leading publisher of classical and contemporary music. For more information visit his personal website <http://gryaznoff.com/en/>
